

50

shades of

MADRID

Welcome to the City Travel Review Guide to Madrid. We have covered all the sides of this sultry city through our 50 Shades of Madrid. Our introduction serves as the first shade so you can get our take on this crazy capital and get yourself situated before adventuring through the city with us. There are 49 shades to follow so get ready to experience all aspects of Madrid as you plan your expedition or simply virtually experience the city from inside these pages. Enjoy!

Introduction

1

Congratulations for having chosen one of the most captivating and diverse capitals of Europe for your travels! From the moment you touch down in Madrid, you are sure to be drawn in by the dynamic whirr of madrileño activity in no time flat.

And, believe me, life does not stop at night. After all, Madrid's nightlife is world famous! Aside from the natural, infectious party atmosphere that courses through the city's veins, there is a more practical reason for this nocturnal attitude. Especially during the summer months, temperatures in Madrid can reach a stifling 40°C, the air rarely cooling off before 17.00/18.00. It therefore seems rather sensible to restrict most activity to the later hours of the day and night, and to hold a siesta (what a gift to the world!) in the afternoon.

This brings us onto the lovely topic of geography. Now, class...no, don't worry – only joking! There are some interesting things to be said about Madrid's geographical location, though. For example, the city is bordered, in the Northwest, by the magnificent Sierra de Guadarrama mountain range, an ideal escape from the urban landscape for many of Madrid's inhabitants. Situated within this mountain range is also the Lozoya Valley, an area that boasts a rich biodiversity, such as the rare Spanish Imperial Eagle and even (it is thought) the Iberian lynx. Madrid also sits upon the Manzanares river, running both above- and underground, which allows for a breath of fresh air within the city.

As a tip for all you early birds, due to its geographical location, madrileño sunrises are particularly spectacular – imagine the sky coming alive with bursts of gold, yellow, orange and pink!

In terms of demography, Madrid is the third largest city in the EU, after London and Berlin. Its population can be split into two distinct areas: the actual city and the Comunidad de Madrid (Madrid Community). The former counts approx. 3.3 million inhabitants, whereas the latter, covering 8000 sq km around the city, exceeds 5 million. The population of Madrid is fantastically diverse, with a strong sense of acceptance. The motto is: 'if you live in Madrid, you are from Madrid!' The main religions are, amongst others, Christianity, Buddhism and Judaism, although there are many more faiths around. Thousands of immigrants are attracted to this multicultural city each year, countries represented including Morocco, Ecuador and China. As the seat of government and the residence of the Spanish monarch, Juan Carlos I, Madrid is also the political centre of Spain.

Finally, as this guide will tell you, Madrid has a fantastic range of cultural and other activities and sites for you to explore and enjoy, from museums and art galleries, to stadiums, parks, tours and much more! As Forrest Gump once so wisely said: "Life [or, in this case, Madrid] is like a box of chocolates. You never know what you're gonna get". So what are you waiting for? Jump into this box and get into the spirit – Madrid awaits!

Muhammed I of Córdoba ordered the building of a small palace called the Alcázar and a surrounding fortress next to the River Manzanares. This river was called al-Majrit by the Moors, roughly meaning 'source of water' in Arabic. This eventually gave Madrid its name.

9th Century

Alfonso VI of León and Castile takes the citadel without a fight and consecrates the mosque, removing all Muslim symbols. The city never falls into Muslim hands again.

1085

The Black Death engulfs Spain and devastates the population of Madrid. Estimates put the death rate between 20-50% of the population.

1348

In a completely unexpected move, Felipe II establishes his permanent court in Madrid, moving the capital away from Toledo. The reason for this is still debated, as Madrid was relatively small and politically unimportant at the time. Many theories have been put forward, including that the King's wife found Toledo too humid for her hair!

1561

1600s

Felipe V is crowned, beginning the Bourbon dynasty that still rules Spain today.

1702

1734

Felipe V's successor Carlos II completes the Royal Palace. He generally modernises Madrid from being one of the dirtiest European cities to one of the cleanest.

1759-88

1808

The French are evicted from France and King Fernando VII is reinstated.

1813

Spain loses its remaining colonies, selling the Philippines to the US. Madrid's modernisation continues.

1898

1919

A cultural revival begins in Madrid, with writers all over the country flocking here. Famous artists and writers include Dali, Lorca, and Bruñuel, who are all based in Madrid at this time.

1920s

1931

Timeline

Madrid's population swells to 180,000 inhabitants from 30,000 the century before, making it the fifth largest city in Europe.

The Alcázar, the fort built by the Moors in the ninth century, burns down and plans for a new Royal Palace are made.

Napoleon's troops take Madrid and Joseph Bonaparte, Napoleon's brother, is made King of Spain. On the 2nd of May the madrileños rise up against the foreign rule but are brutally put down. This is famously captured by Goya in 'El dos de Mayo' de 1808 en Madrid that can be viewed in the Prado.

Madrid's first metro line starts running

Elections in 1931 pave way for a Republican-Socialist coalition, shortly after a republic is announced and the then King Alonso XIII flees the country.

Left-wing Frente Popular narrowly beats Francisco Franco's Falange party and he is duly exiled to the Canary Islands. The army, who supports right-wing parties, begin to mutiny. Franco returns and begins his advance from the south. By November, he was in Casa de Campo in the West of the city. Franco's forces begin a siege and bomb the city with artillery and German planes. The people of Madrid try to carry on with their daily lives throughout the continual bombardment.

1936-1939

1939

On the 28th March, after just under three years, the Madrid defenders decide to surrender.

1940s - 1950s

Franco embarks on a campaign of oppression to punish Madrid for its resistance. Tens of thousands of suspected Socialist and Nationalist sympathisers are arrested or killed. There is extreme economic hardship during this time, with international sanctions, because of Spain's involvement with Hitler.

1960s

Madrid, and Spain as a whole, experience an economic boom in the años de desarrollo (development years). Opposition to Franco finds a voice through the student body and the unions.

1973

Franco's designated successor and PM Admiral Carrero Blanco is assassinated by ETA.

1975

On the 20th November Franco, having been ill for some time, dies. Liberal optimism sweeps the country even though the officials loyal to Franco remain in control.

1975-8

A moderate supporter of Franco, Adolfo Suarez, becomes leader in 1976. With King Juan Carlos I, he pushes through political reforms. In 1977 elections were held, which Suarez's centre right party won, and they wrote a new constitution in collaboration with other political groups. Significant devolution occurs and the Madrid community is given great autonomy.

1980s

Cultural Revolution occurs in Madrid with drink, drugs and sex becoming suddenly more acceptable in what has been called La Movida Madrileña. This era produces creative talents such as Almodóvar. Mayor Enrique Tierno Galván presides over this period and embraces this new freedom.

2004

On the 11th March four bombs on trains explode in Madrid three days before a national election. In total 191 die and 1800 people are injured. ETA is originally blamed but Islamic terrorism is then found to be culpable.

2008-2012

The worldwide economic crisis has hit Spain especially hard due to many factors, but mainly because of the extreme reliance on property that Spanish growth has been based on. Youth unemployment is especially high in Spain compared with many European countries. However, levels of unemployment in Madrid are not as high as many places, at only 15% instead of nearer the 20% average nationwide. Protests are a near everyday occurrence in Madrid.

Palacio Real

This sprawling display of Bourbon power stands erect as the largest Palace in Western Europe. Complete with a fully stocked royal armoury, a pharmacy and numerous priceless paintings to complement the impressive architecture, this building is certainly worth a visit.

Puerto del Sol

Defined as the center of the city, this plaza used to house a large archway facing east and west that the sun would rise and set through, hence the name Puerta del Sol. Here you will find La Osa y El Madroño statue, the symbol of the city as well as numerous fountains and tour opportunities. It serves as a great point of departure for any exploration of the city. Open daily for tours.

Plaza Mayor

A bustling plaza made for the people of Madrid not serves as a hub for many tourists trying to grab a bite to eat in an authentic feeling square. Avoid the restaurants here as they are over priced, but stroll around to soak up the Spanish sun and stop by the Tourist office if you are in need of a map or other helpful tidbits to enhance your vacation.

3

Los Austrias, Centro, & Sol

Blending the historical past with the modern present, this neighbourhood thrives in the middle of Madrid, housing the roots of Catholicism in Madrid, the Royal Palace, and Plaza del Puerta del Sol, quite literally the heart of Madrid. It is here that tourist and natives will cross paths to experience some of the greatest things Madrid has to offer. Surrounded by the ceaseless sounds of city life, this neighbourhood oozes energy and allows any traveler to get a taste of Madrid that spans the centuries. Revel in the splendor left over from the Hapsburg Dynasty's rule from the 16th-18th centuries. Grab a bocadillo calamares at Plaza Mayor, the old local gathering spot for madrileños. Get a taste of all the flavors of Madrid in this essential starting point for any visit to the city.

Salamanca

Salamanca stretches from the Paseo de Recoletos and Paseo de la Castellana to the Calle de Alcalá and Calle O'Donnell and is situated in the northeastern part of Madrid. The most high traffic (and high priced) streets are Serrano, Velázquez, and Goya. Named after Marqués de Salamanca, a Spanish nobleman, business man, and politician, this district is one of the most posh in Madrid. Some notable attractions include the Museo Lázaro Galdiano, the Fundación Juan March, and the Buen Retiro Park. It also contains the Museo de Escultura al Aire Libre, Plaza de Colón, and the Museo Sorolla. In Salamanca, you will find all the high fashion houses from Louis Vuitton to Valentino. Calle Goya is a particular shopping hotspot and some of the side streets like Calle Princesa offer more affordable options. In the district, there are also shopping centers like Galería ABC Serrano and smaller Spanish boutiques such as Adolfo Domínguez. In the nearby district of Chamberí (although most consider it part of Salamanca) you will find the Biblioteca Nacional de España, Museo Arqueológico Nacional, Museo Romántico, Teatro de María Guerrero, and the Madrid Wax Museum. The barrio offers a variety of cuisine from North African to vegetarian. Some famous picks include El Amparo and Jockey and two of the best bars and tapas spots are Tasca la Farmacia and Estay.

Top 3 Things to do in Salamanca

1. Chill out in the Retiro Park which can be accessed from Salamanca.
2. Visit the Fundación Juan March Cultural Center. Calle Castelló 77. Holds free concerts, exhibitions, lectures, and other cultural activities.
3. See the Museo Lázaro Galdiano which houses a variety of works and artistic mediums from a variety of famous artists from Goya to El Greco. Open daily except Tuesday 10:00-16:30, Sunday from 10:00-15:00. Admission €6, Guided evenings €8 by reservation, Reduced entry €3 (Students, seniors, large families, groups, disabled people), Free entry the last hour of opening, for the unemployed, and teachers. Metro: Ruben Dario, Gregorio Marañón, Nunez de Balboa, American Avenue.

4

Chueca

Chueca, which is bordered by Calle de Fuenarral, Plaza de Alonso Martínez, Calle de Génova, Paseo de Recoletos and Gran Vía, is one of the most up-and-coming districts in Madrid. The barrio is an excellent place to go for a night out. Perhaps best known as the gay and lesbian district of Madrid, Chueca is an exciting place for all travelers and represents tolerance and diversity in the city. The area is comparable to London's Soho after its transformation from high-end area, to decay, and then back up to the hip list.

At times it is a bit over the top, but herein lies its unique charm. Perhaps this flamboyance is best embodied in the Sociedad General de Autores, a Gaudí style building that was originally a private mansion and is now home to a major copyright organization. The barrio also contains the Palacio de Justicia (Palace of Justice), Braganza Church, and Iglesia de San Antón. Galería Moriarty (Calle de la Libertad 22), a gallery important to the Movida Madrileña in the 1980s, displays a variety of artists' work and should definitely be seen in the district.

At the heart of the district is the Plaza de Chueca, which is a good starting point from which to explore the various bars and cafés in the barrio. Calle de la Libertad is one of the best streets for eating; Cíedel Piamonte is the place to go for accessories. In general, most of the nicer shops are on the eastern side of Chueca. El Tigre (Calle de Hortaleza 23 & 30) and Baco y Beto (Calle de Pelayo 24) are great spots for tapas and Boga Bar (Calle del Almirante 11) has excellent seafood.

5

Chamberí & Argüelles

These two neighbourhoods are located just north of the city centre and are quickly developing a reputation for the premier place to live in Madrid. The areas are generally residential and classic tourist attractions are limited in number and but there is plenty to do and see here if you know where to look. Shopping is prevalent here with all major chain stores having a presence; furthermore, there are countless small boutiques that sell a variety of high quality produce. Examples include Antiguiedades Hom (Calle de Juan de Austria 31, 91 594 20 17) that sells antique Spanish fans. Children's clothing can be found at Los Bedes de Chamberí (Calle de Gonzado de Córdoba). The attractions that can be visited include Templo de Debod and the fascinating Estación de Chamberí where an unused metro stop has been transformed into a museum.

6

Paseo del Prado

This picturesque tree-lined boulevard is not only a lovely place to take a break from Madrid's blazing summer sun and enjoy a scenic city stroll, but is also home to a wealth of important cultural and tourist attractions.

Art and history lovers will be enamoured by the 'Golden Triangle of Art'. Capture the wondrous works of Rembrandt and Van Gogh at Museo Thyssen-Bornemisza, be awed by Picasso's 'Guernica' at Reina Sofia and pay homage to Velázquez's 'Las Meninas' at Museo del Prado.

If you start at Atocha Renfe station and work your way down, you can also visit the Royal Botanical Gardens, discover monuments, fountains, beautiful buildings to admire and much more. This pedestrian paradise is a whole trip in itself and any attempt to 'do it all' in one day is simply impossible, so set

7

8

Malasaña

In the heart of Madrid just west of Chueca, north of Gran Via, you'll find the bohemian barrio of Malasaña. Famous for leading the way in Madrid's sociocultural movement, La movida Madrileña during the early 1980's.

This charming part of Madrid welcomes you with a down-to-earth greeting, stuffed with little boutiques, alternative, vintage and retro shops. For your appetite, cafés like Bar El 2nd provide a soundtrack straight out of the eighties and restaurants such as Isla Del Tesoro dish out tasty vegetarian delights that are reasonably priced too.

The bars and clubs offer an alternative to the contrasting clubs of Sol and much like its London counterpart Camden, you can hear the indie and punk music rocking the bars and clubs. Weekends here are heaving with groups of young people all out to have a good time and you're bound to bump into an illegal cerveza seller.

Some argue that Malasaña is losing its alternative edge as it slowly becomes more commercial, but for now it is still a great place to hang out.

La Latina & Lavapiés

Lavapiés

This lively and exciting working class neighbourhood, just off Plaza Tirso de Molina, is homely with an exotic twist. The colourful surroundings and bustle of people is a melting pot of Moroccans, Indians, Turks and Chinese. Often described as Madrid's, "most multicultural neighbourhood", Lavapiés is home to anyone and everyone. The narrow streets of this charismatic area do not take time to siesta and if you take a trip there you will find friendly 'locals' selling clothes, teas and spices daily. The local retro cinema, Ciné Dore, is great for a night out with a cosy, community atmosphere and food is a must, whether you choose to have Indian food from one of the many restaurants in the area near Lavapiés metro or tortilla and stew in one of the more traditional bars such as Taberna Antonio Sanchez .

9

La Latina

La Latina blends the architectural culture of old time Madrid with the famous and ongoing spirit of the Madrilenos. The historic area is one of the oldest neighbourhoods in the city; its medieval appearance is still visible today with its narrow, twisted streets and timeless architecture. This is a great place to see old churches such as San Francisco El Grande, which is widely known as one of the most beautiful churches in Spain, one look at the ornate domed ceiling and you will see why. The area is steeped in tradition and home to the famous El Rastro market held each Sunday, where locals come to sell and buy from the quaint market stalls.

Despite its important historical aspects La Latina is best known for its lively nightlife and thriving bars and restaurants. It has the largest collection of Tapas Bars in Madrid and a visit to Cava Baja for a tapas crawl will set you up for the night ahead. Belly full, you can stumble on to Plaza de la Paja or Plaza Cebade into a club and continue the fiesta into the early hours of the morning. The central location and varied nightlife make La Latina the perfect place to stay in Madrid for people looking to mix sightseeing with a good time.

Huertas is Madrid's most famous literary area. During Spain's Golden Age it is where many of the city's famous authors and playwrights lived and it is still Madrid's most theatrical hub. Calle Huertas is home to a busy mix of tapas bars and restaurants, with the two most popular bars side by side. Magister is a micro brewery that also serves some excellent free tapas and Viva Madrid, built in 1856, is the oldest bar in the city. This area is well worth a visit if you want to walk in the footsteps of the famous Spanish literary masters and enjoy some of the best food and drink Madrid has to offer.

Atocha is most famous for having the largest railway station in Madrid. The eye-catching structure of wrought iron and tropical plant life is a wonder to behold. The original train station, built in 1892 was modified in recent years and enclosed within the newer station; the historical landmark was turned into shops and cafes. It is the perfect place to start off a day trip as the trams there take you across all of Spain.

10

Huertas y Atocha

The CTR Team

From left to right: Lizzie, Rhodri, Lyndsey, Arianna, Mallory, Lily, Nichola, Anna, Lucy. Not Pictured : Mo and Elizabeth

Lily Black

Boutique Shopping, High Street Shopping, Designer Shopping, Casa del Campo, Retiro Park, Siesta, Hostel/Hotels, Walking Tours

Lucy Christie

Football, Jamón, Botellon, Pinxtos, Wok Sol, Terral, La Carrera de Tacones, Teatro Real

Mallory Conder

Cultural Centers, Spanish Food, Manzanares River, Segovia, Churches, Flamenco, Café de Chinitas, Los Austrias, Centro & Sol,

Lizzie Davey

Monuments, Fountains, Discotecas, Famous Madrileños, San Gines, San Miguel Market

Mo Miah

Real Madrid Stadium, Atletico Madrid Stadium, Taj Mahal

Layout Team

Anna Murphy

Golden Triangle Museums, Medical Advice, La Osa y El Madroño, Rascafría, Introduction, Plazas, Anujuez, Acalá de Hernas

Elizabeth Prekas

Ávila, Toledo, Street Performers, Important Figures Sculpted Around Madrid, Museo Nacional de Romanticismo, Cine Dore, Fountains

Lyndsey Temingamoako

Jazz Bars, Paseo del Prado, Malasaña, Madrid Gay Orgullo, Bulls,

Arianna Trozze

Dolores Promesas, Salamanca, Eating Vegetarian, Live Music, Other Museums, Beyond the Golden Triangle, Majaderitos Café, EMT, Cardamomo, Theater & Opera

Nichola Ward

Cafés, Literature, Bookshops, La Latina & Lavapies, Huertas & Atocha, Outdoor Activities, Metro

Rhodri Williams

History, Chamberí & Argüelles

Lucy Christie

Mallory Conder

Lizzie Davey

Arianna Trozze